Maximize Typing Speed

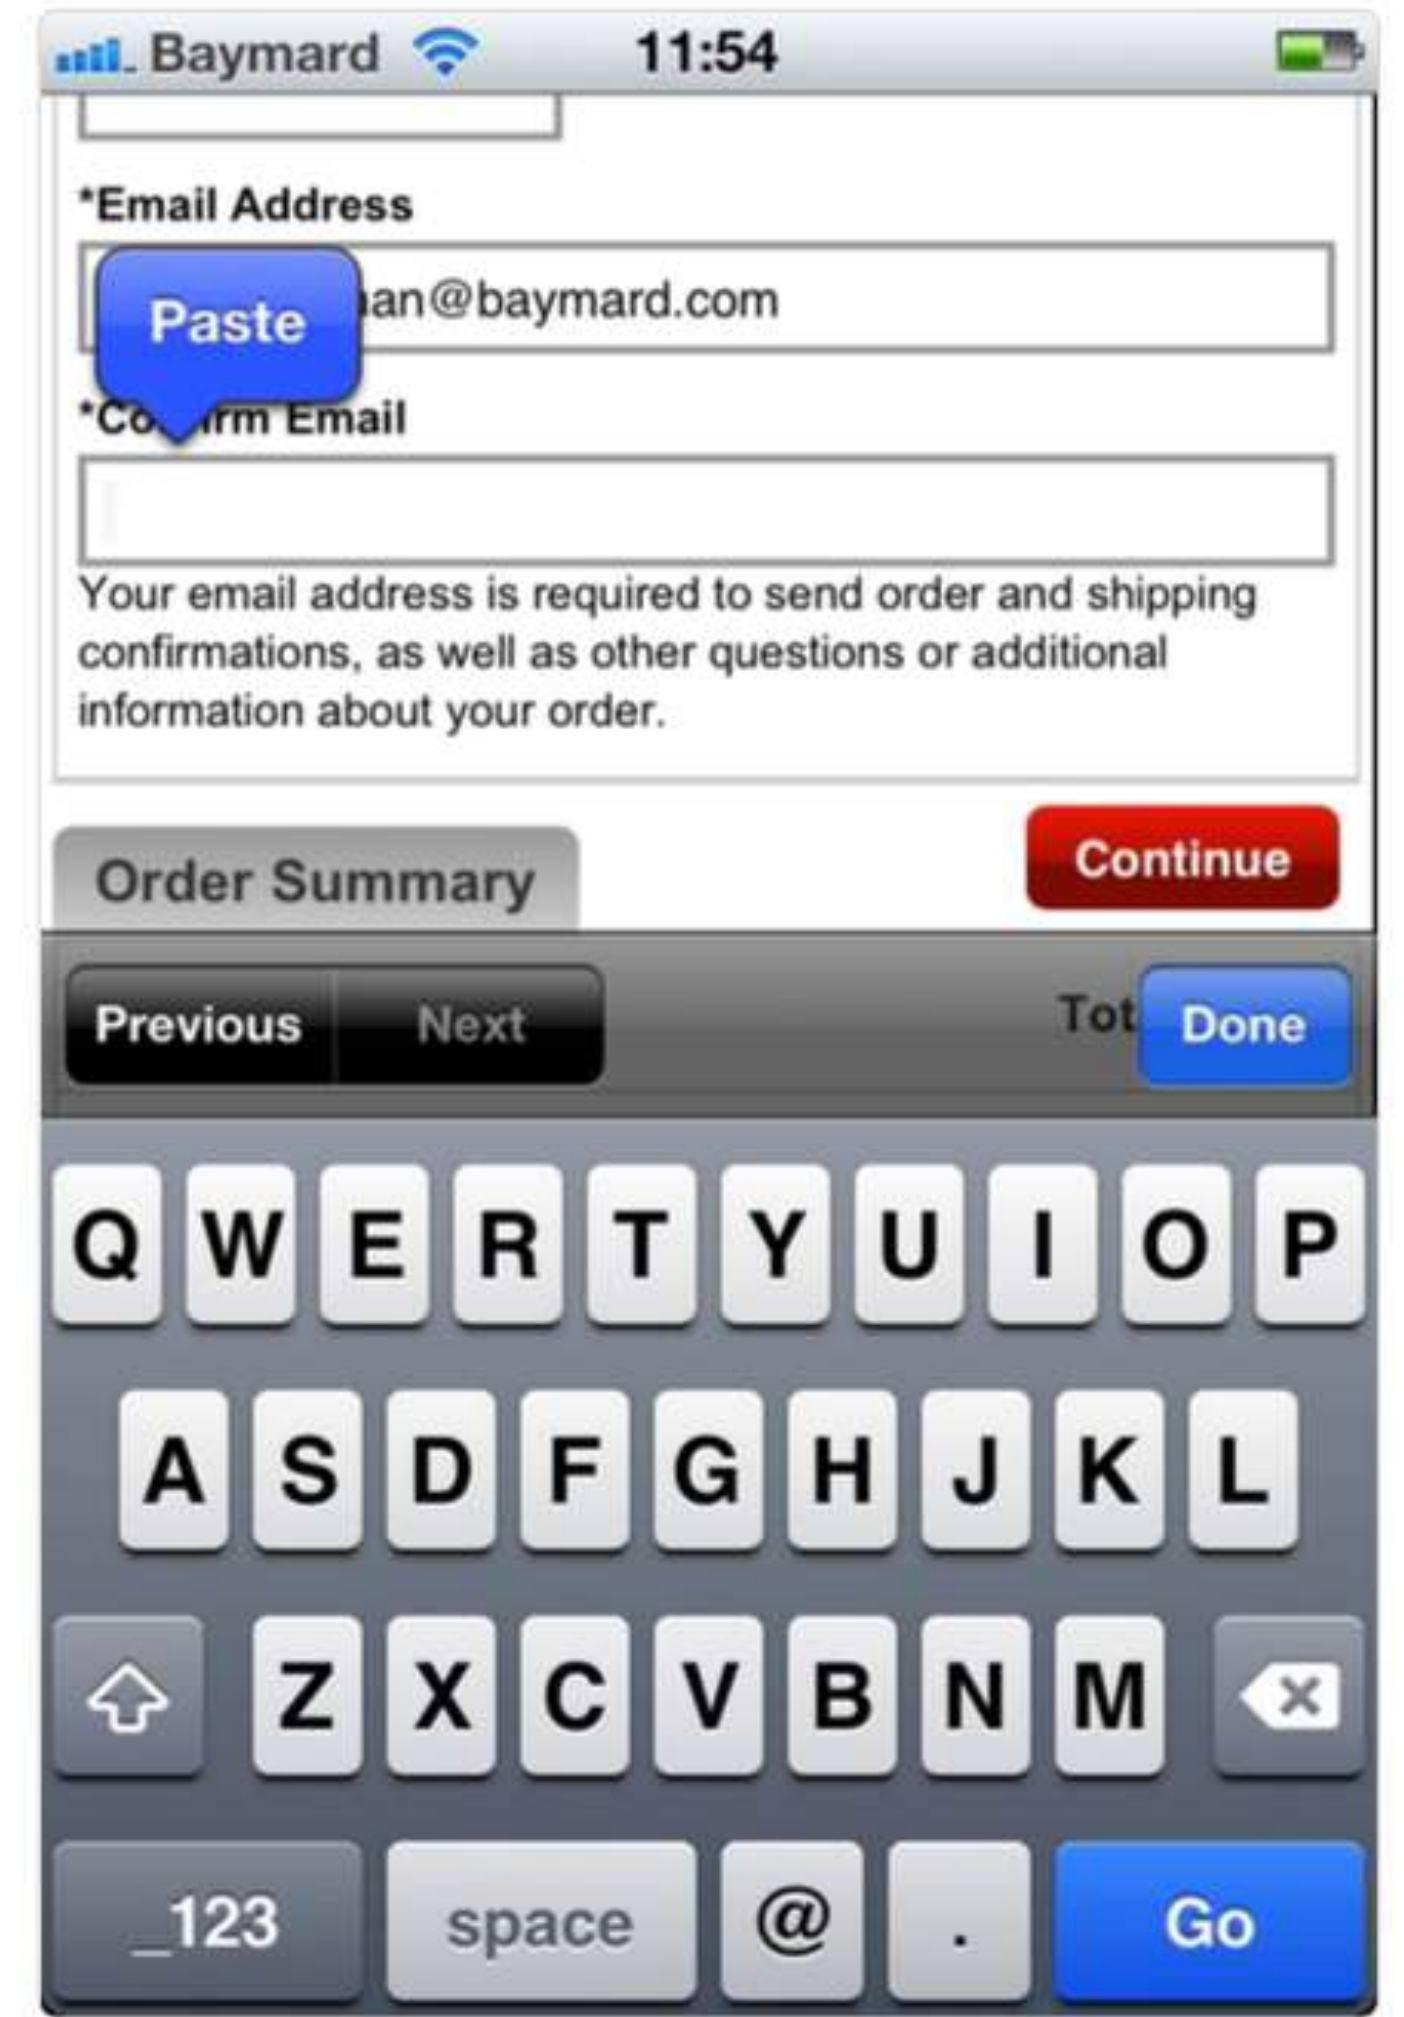

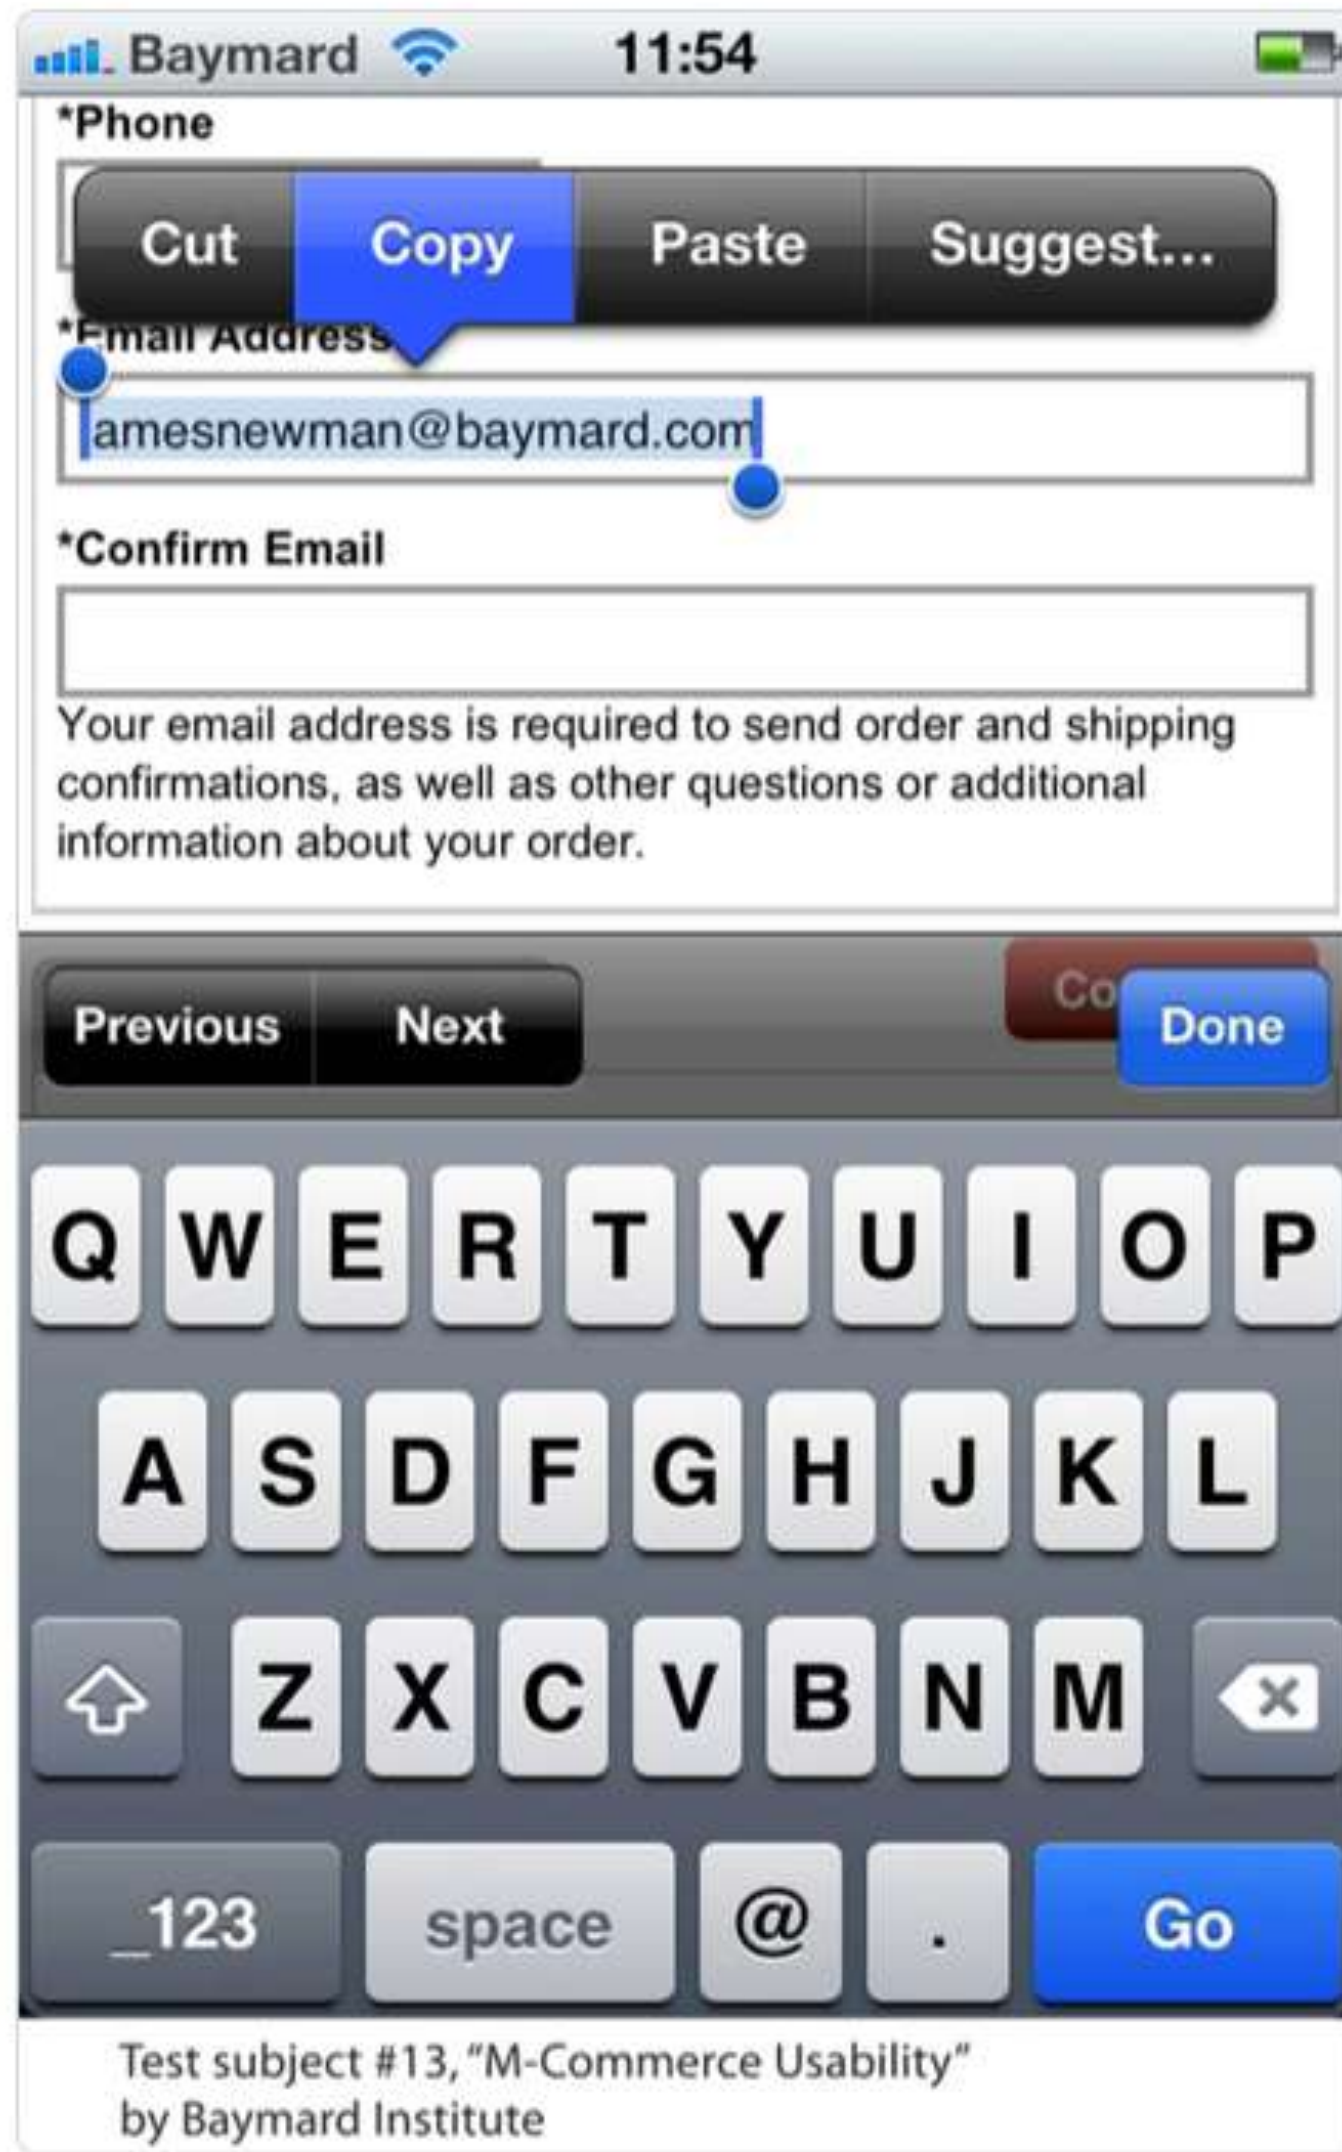

- 01 – Average user types 1 char in an English word in 280ms.
- 02 – Average user types 1 char in an obscure text in 750ms.
- 03 – Average user needs 400ms to switch keyboard <-> mouse.
- 04 – Average user needs 1100ms to point a mouse cursor precisely.
- 05 – Using mouse to move between fields, ready to type: 1900ms.
- 06 – Using tabs to move between fields, ready to type: 280–740ms.
- 07 – Even very slow typing takes 280–740ms per character.
- 08 – With an 8-field address form, tabbing is 3× faster (5,9s vs. 15,2s).
- 09 – Avoid switching keyboard <-> mouse input as far as possible.
- 10 – With autofill, completion times are reduced by around 30%.

Input Budgets For Forms

- 01 – Typing on mobile is still slow and inaccurate.
- 02 – Changing input source (tap/type/scroll) is expensive.
- 03 – Input flow is rarely linear: a lot of movement back and forth.
- 04 – With text input, typos/errors are inevitable.
- 05 – Error messages are often overlooked.
- 06 – Touch input is always faster/better than text input.

Input Budgets For Forms

- 01 – Always prefer (large) buttons, toggles, sliders.
- 02 – When typing, let users stay on keypad + autocomplete.
- 03 – Set a safety net with smart defaults, forgiving input.
- 04 – Make use of autofill with the autocomplete attribute.
- 05 – Persist the data upon refresh (storing in localStorage).
- 06 – Measure completion time with a min # of taps per form.
- 07 – Measure complexity with a max # of input fields per step.

Right Timing For Input

- 01 – When's the right time for any given action?
- 02 – When's the right time to verify email?
- 03 – When's the right time to ask for a password?
- 04 – When's the right time to ask for location permission?
- 05 – When's the right time to ask for push notifications?
- 06 – When's the right time to move users into the funnel?
- 07 – What's the minimum needed to get started?

Text Boxes are Text Boxes

-  Obvious if look like a text box, with good padding + bordered.
-  Width gives a clue as to the length of the input it requires.
-  Need a clear label association, a predictable tab order, focus and active styles to be accessible.
-  Large boxes are easy to fill in, edit and review (18px+).
-  The choice of labels and placeholders needs care.
-  Need care for keyboard choice, autofocus, autofill, autocorrect, capitalization.

Description

Labels and Placeholders

-  Top-aligned labels perform best: avoid localization issues.
-  Perfectly accessible by default; lettercase is often friendlier.
-  Avoid left-aligned labels: issues on small viewports, zooming, dense wrapping.
-  Single-column layout generally performs best.
-  Labels set expectations, placeholders help fulfill them.
-  Make sure to add hints for sensitive input (e.g. password, phone number, gender).

Adam Silver on

Floating Labels Need Care

“Floating labels act as placeholders, and as such don't leave space for any extra hints. By design, they are often hard to read, usually can't be lengthy, can be mistaken for a real pre-filled value and can be cropped on mobile.

“Form Design Patterns”, published by Smashing Magazine

Adam Silver on

Placeholder issues

“Placeholders disappear when the user types, users often mistake a placeholder for a value, skipping the field and causing errors later. Some screen readers don't announce them, and long hint text may get cut off.

“Form Design Patterns”, published by Smashing Magazine

Required/Optional Input Fields

It's a safe bet to highlight both required and optional input fields. If not, both completion time and failure rate increase. Red asterisk and “(Optional)” labels work.

Adam Silver on

Marking Optional and Required

“ We mark something in the interface to indicate that it’s different. Most fields are required, so we need to mark only optional fields then. For clarity we could mark both optional and required (Baymard Institute).

“Form Design Patterns”, published by Smashing Magazine

E-Commerce Checkouts Need to Mark Both Required and Optional Fields Explicitly (Only 24% Do So)

The screenshot shows a checkout form titled "Your Contact Information". It includes fields for "Email Address" and "Re-enter Email Address", both of which have red error messages: "Please enter your email address." and "Please re-enter your email address." respectively. Below these are fields for "Evening Phone Number (optional)" and radio buttons for "Home", "Work", and "Mobile". A "Return to Shipping Information" link is present. A large red circle highlights the "CONTINUE" button, which has a warning icon and a message: "Please correct the items highlighted in red above to continue." The form also features a "Payment Options (Step 3 of 4)" and "Review and Place Order (Step 4 of 4)" section. A Norton Secured logo is visible on the right side. A note at the bottom states: "*Excluding taxes and L.L.Bean Visa Card savings, if applicable." The text "applicable discounts are included in prices shown)" is also visible at the top right of the form area.

Marking both required and optional fields in the checkout is a controversial area of form usability.

When we first benchmarked this issue in 2012 only 9% of sites explicitly marked both fields, in 2016 things had improved a little with 14% of sites marking both. Our 2019 benchmark shows only little

Radio Buttons Are Round

 Exposed, making options easy to compare, scan and select.

 Fit well only for mutually exclusive options.

 Restrictive, so usually need an “Other” option as fallback.

 Conventionally round, and often tapped on mobile.

 Can be laid out in a table for a quick comparison.

 Less suitable when there are many options.

Button Inputs

Avoid <select>-Dropdowns

Prevent locale/formatting differences and errors.

Slow input, causing unneeded extra clicks.

Users try to type into them to jump instead of scrolling.

Users often confuse them with autocorrect.

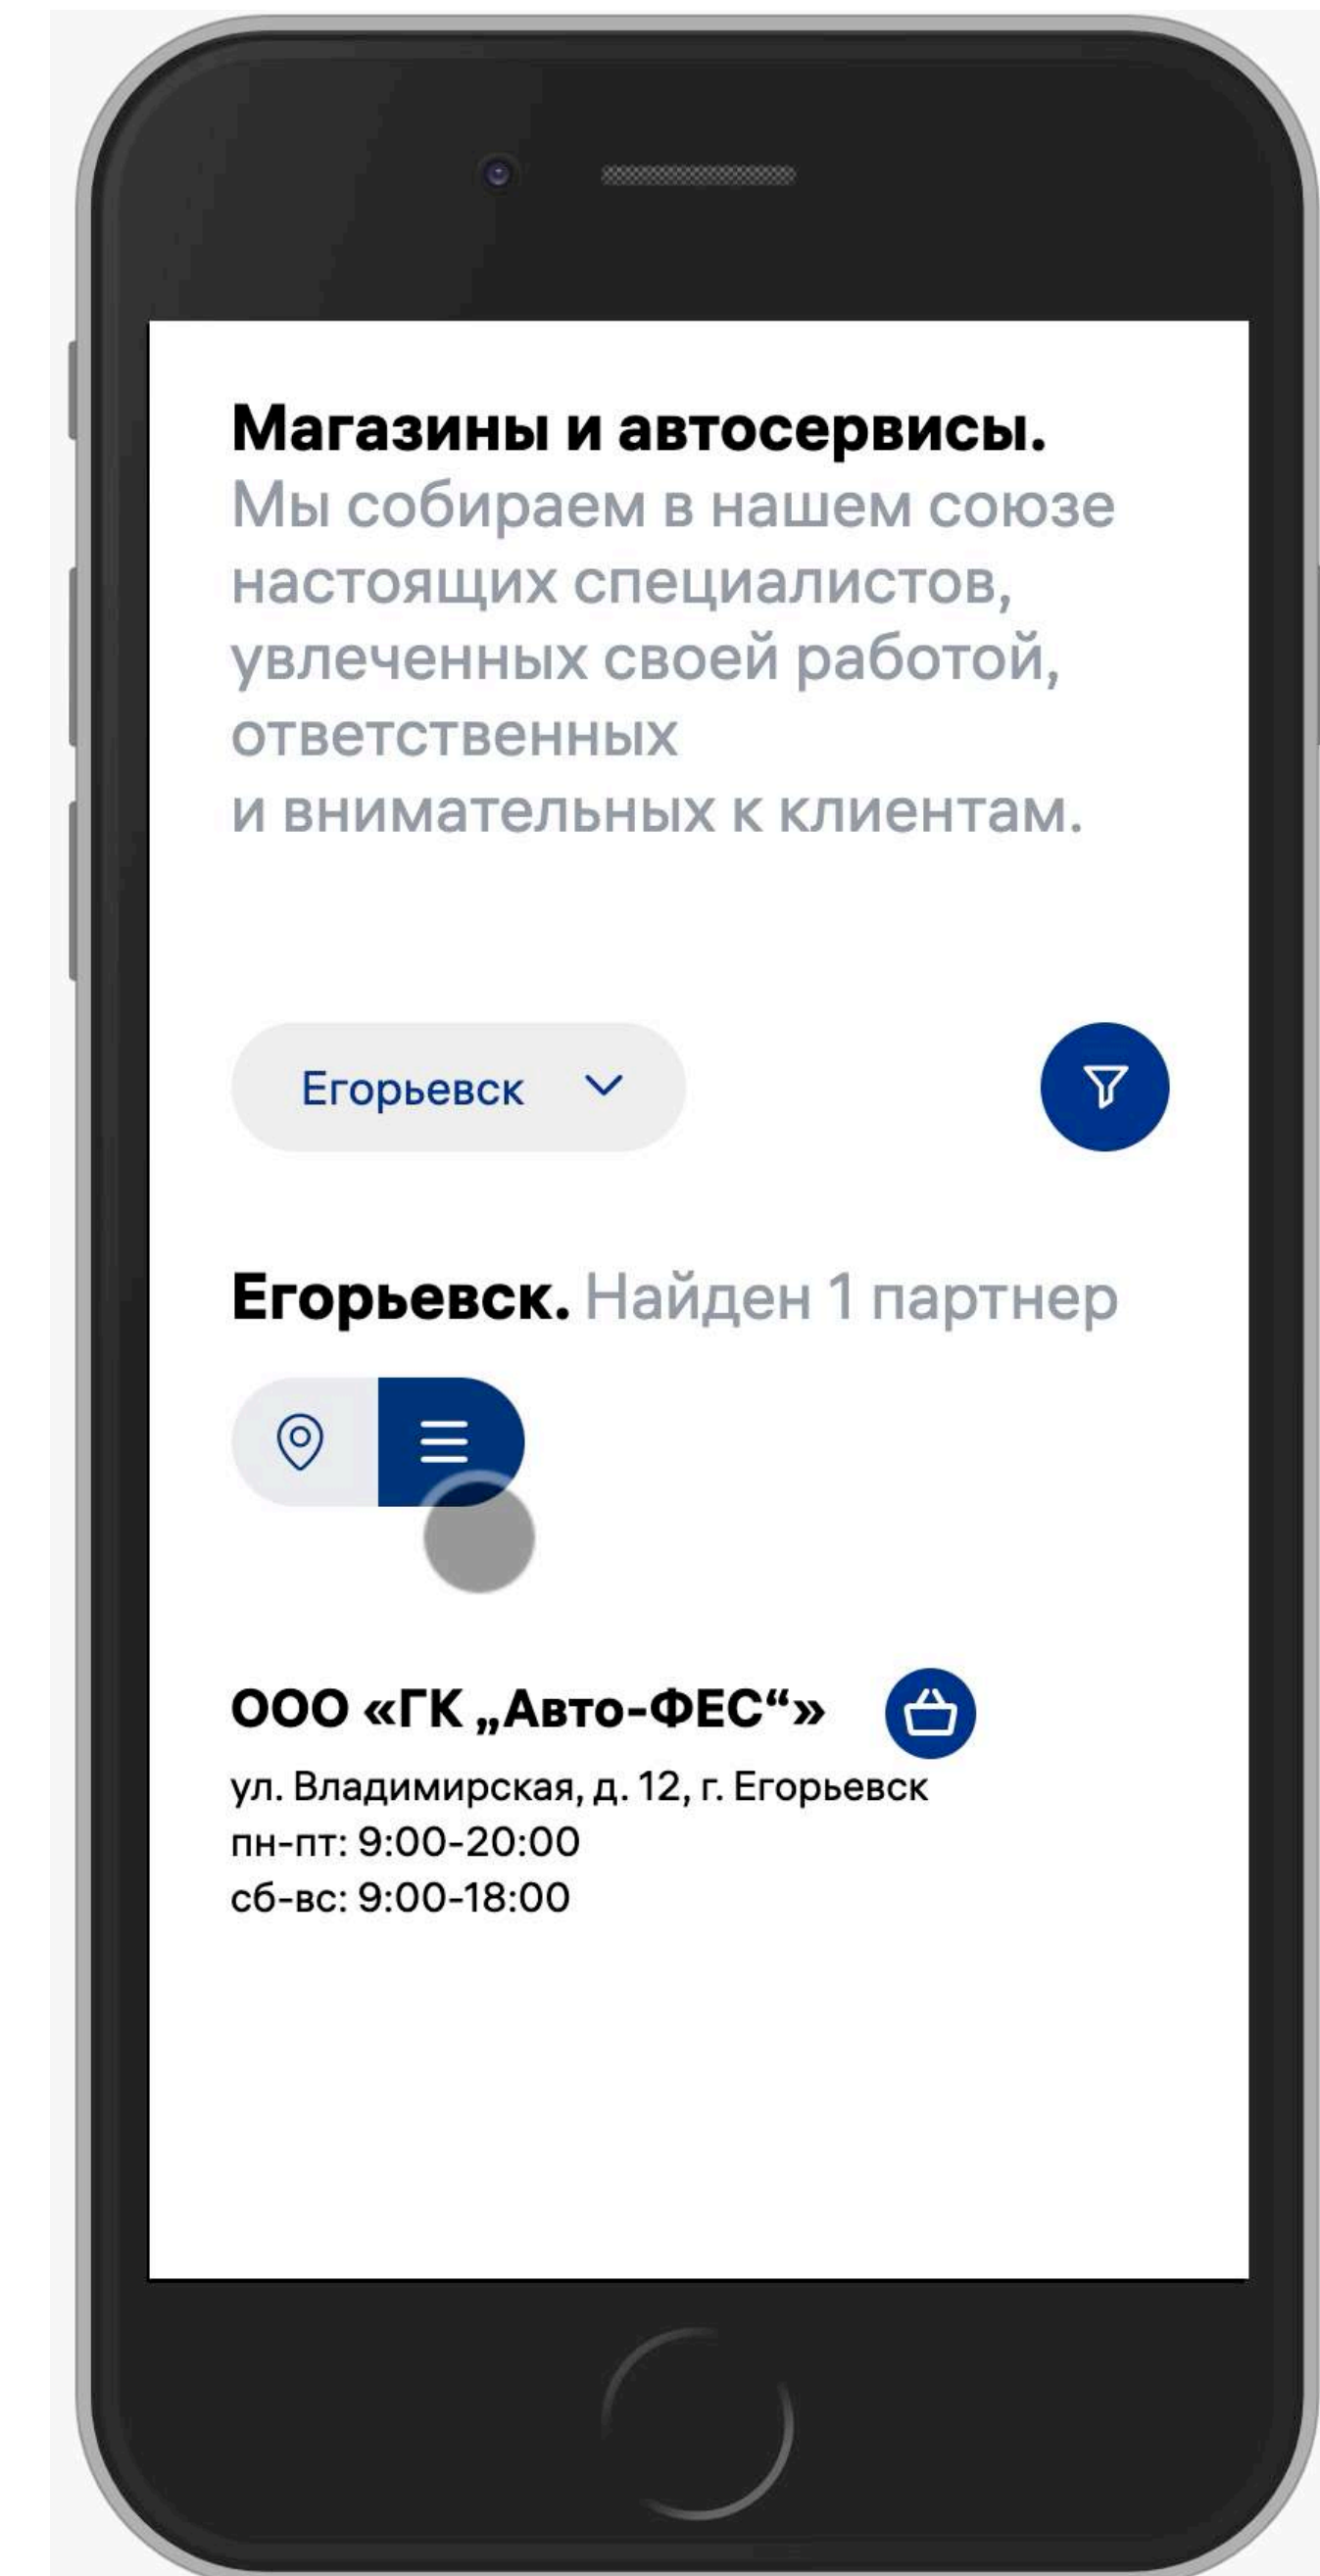

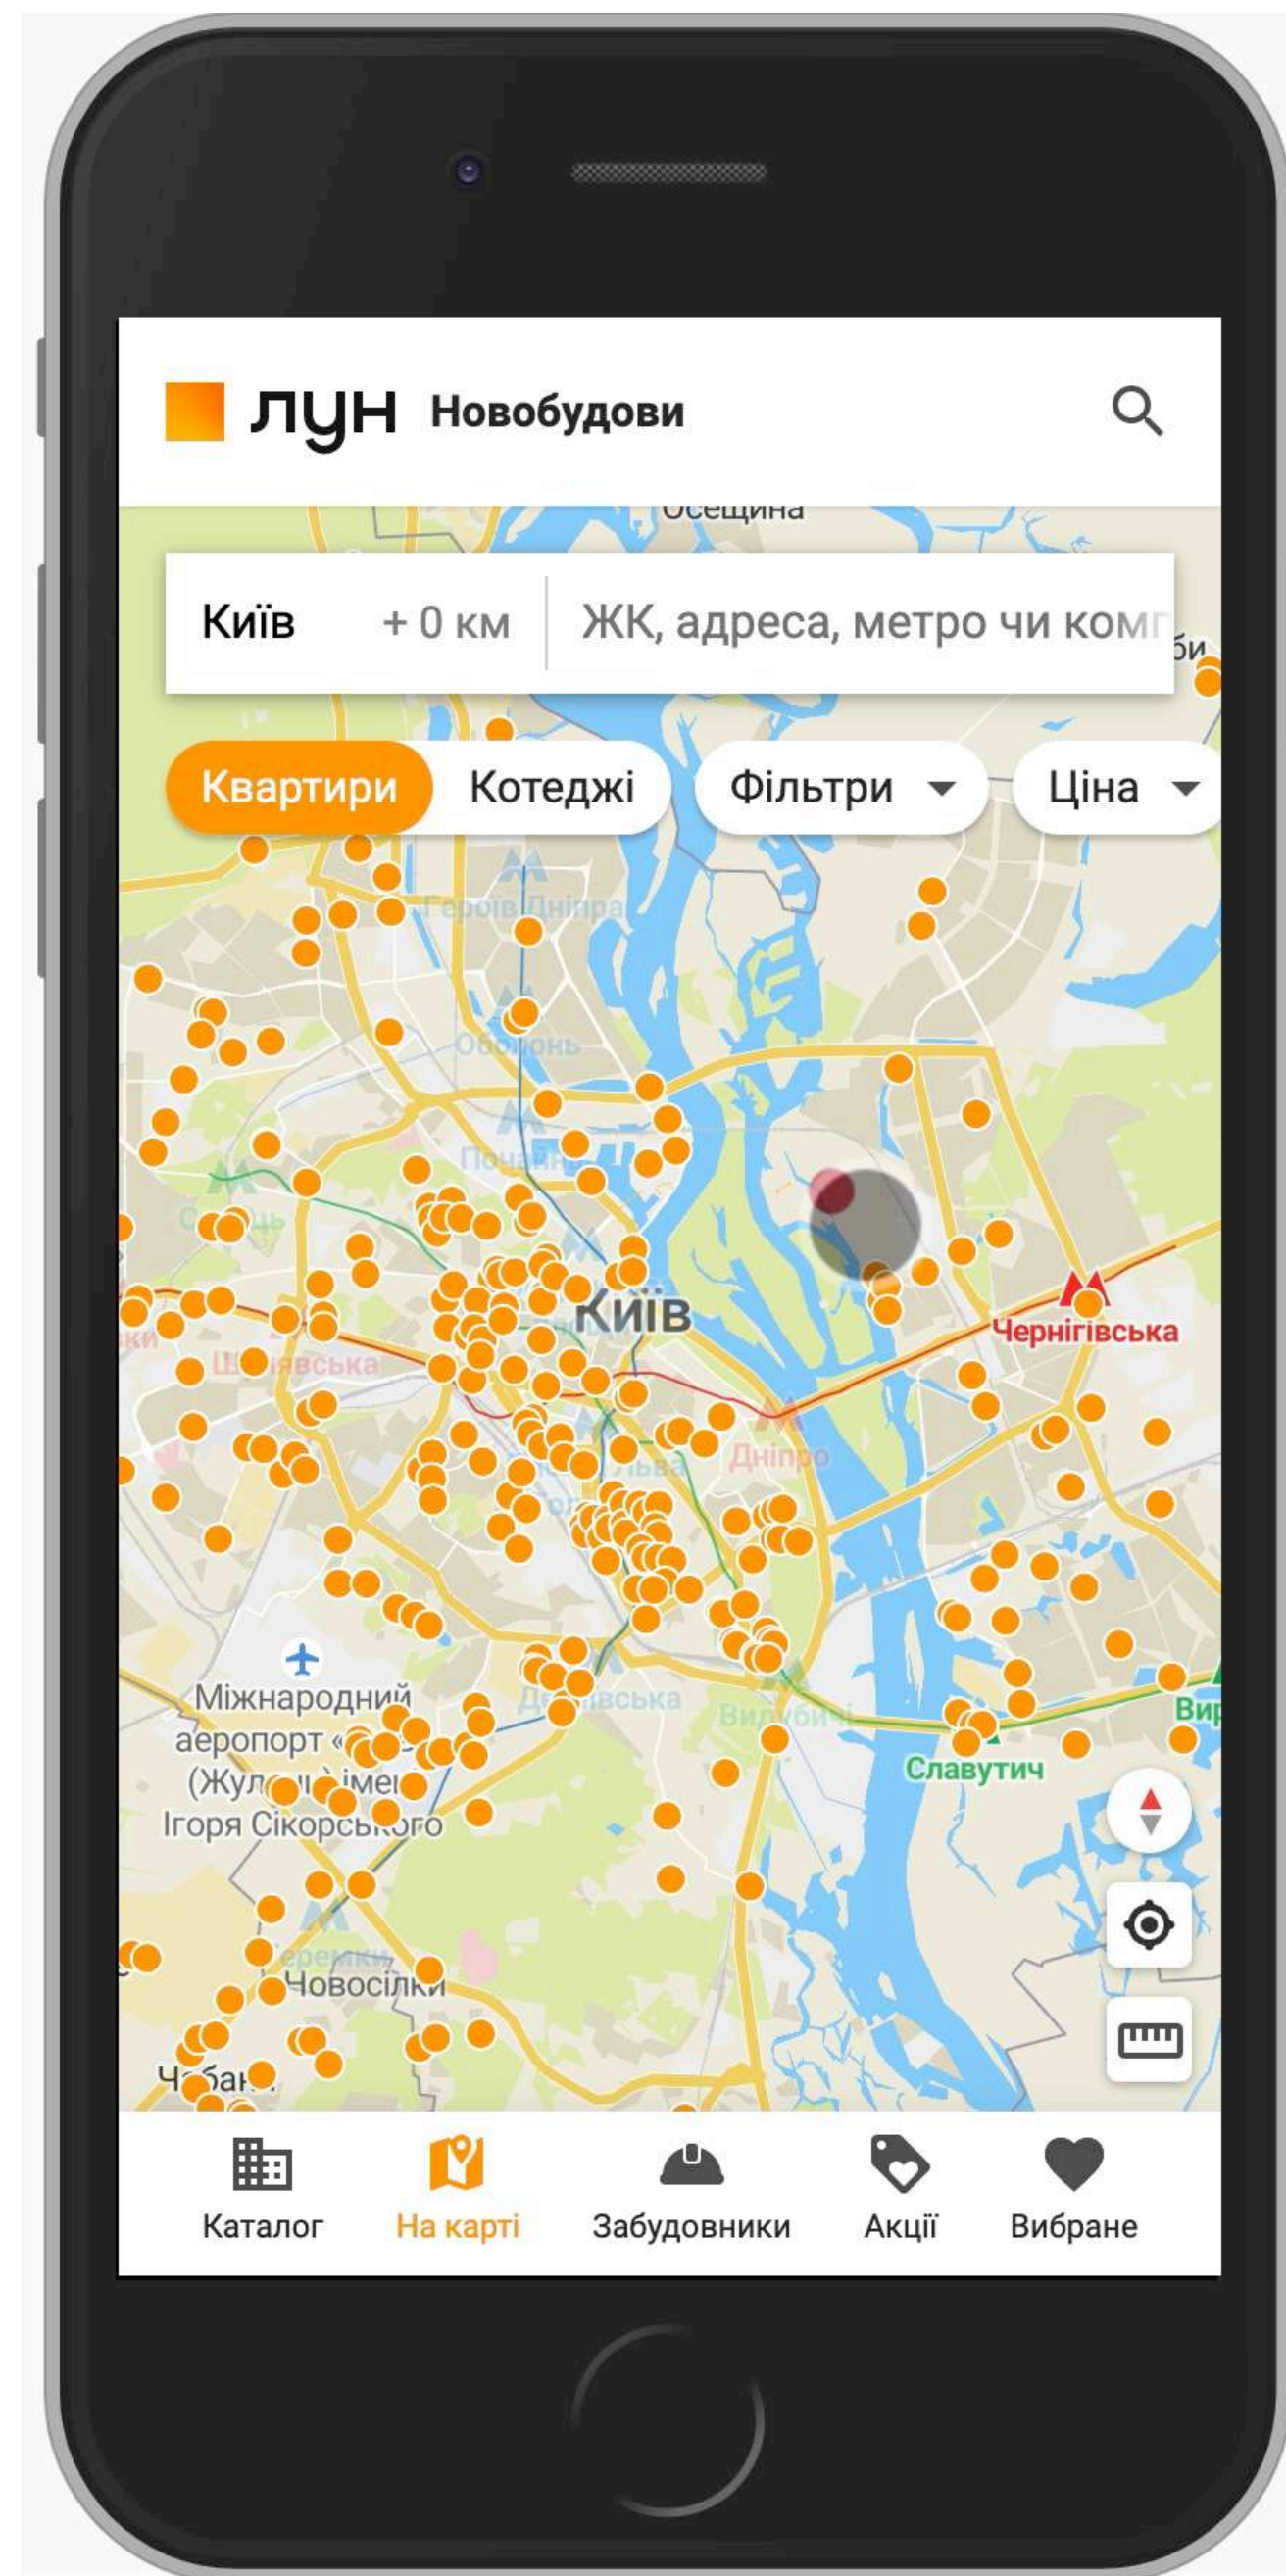

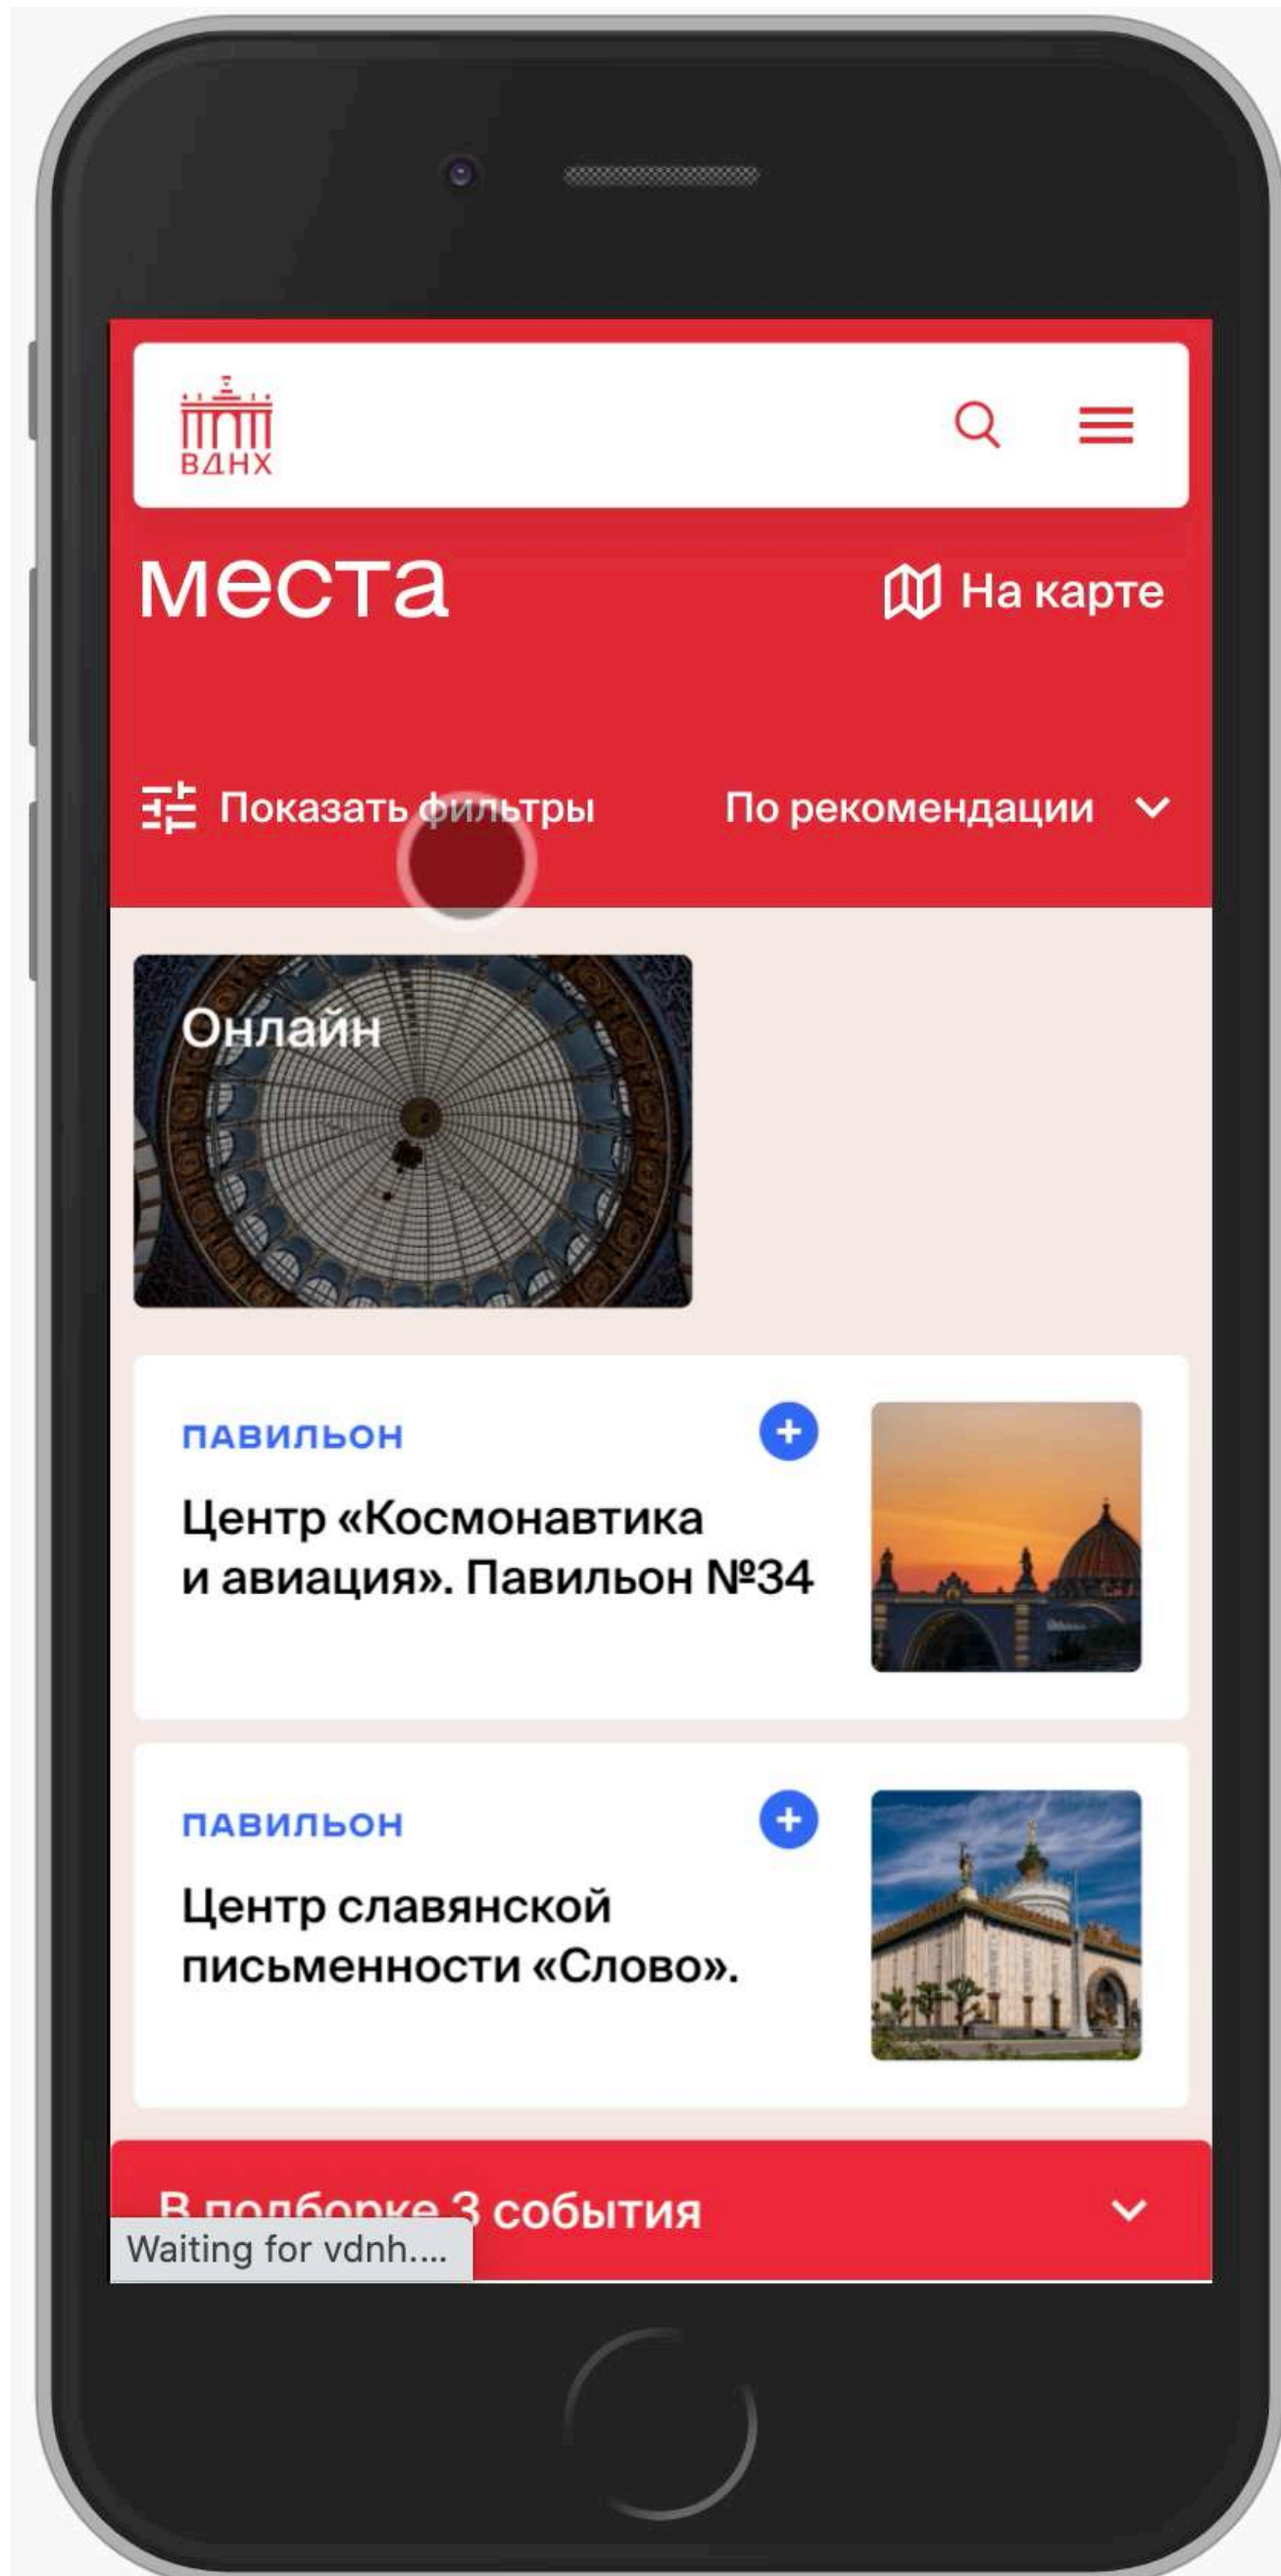

Users confuse focused options with selected ones.

Pinching and zooming scrollable options is tiring.

Consider using steppers or datalist with autocomplete.

Prefer Steppers and Buttons

 Steppers are great for quick, predictable, granular changes.

 Great for quick filtering, especially with results count.

 Don't trigger on-screen keyboard, save space on mobile.

 Steppers are great for a small number of options (<10).

 Can be used for quantities, time jumps, nav, sliders.

 Steppers are too annoying when exploring many options.

Prefer Datalists & Autocomplete

 Marry flexibility of a text box with assurance of a select-box.

 Great for quick filtering, especially with results count.

 Frequent hits could be surfaced/featured at the top.

 No need to scroll to find the right option.

 Could be used to display direct results and categories.

 Have to be smart enough to forgive minor typos and errors. Accessibility requirements.

Redesigning the Country Selector

Turning standard drop-downs into advanced auto-complete fields

During our large-scale checkout ux study we found several usability issues when using a drop-down for your country selector: a lack of overview, unclear sorting, scrolling issues, inconsistent UIs, a lack of context on mobile devices, and finally, they break the user's tab-flow.

So we took it upon ourselves to redesign the country selector.

Using principles of progressive enhancement we turn a standard drop-down into an advanced auto-complete field. This means the drop-down remains accessible, while providing a much better experience in modern browsers - handling typos, multiple spelling sequences, synonyms and prioritization.

You can read the more about the design process and usability aspects in our article on Smashing Magazine: Redesigning the Country Selector.

Structuring forms

This guide explains how to structure online forms.

Design your forms for the format they'll appear in

Paper forms and digital forms have different strengths and weaknesses. Design for both formats with the same amount of care and attention.

The movement from paper to digital is an opportunity to transform how your service is delivered - don't just put your paper forms online.

Page contents:

- Design your forms for the format they'll appear in

Start with one thing per page

Start by splitting the form across multiple pages with each page containing just one thing, for example:

- one piece of information you're telling a user
- one decision they have to make
- one question they have to answer

User research will tell you when you can merge pages together. For example, if you're designing an internal service for government users who need to repeat and switch between tasks quickly.

Starting with one thing on a page helps people to:

- understand what you're asking them to do
- focus on the specific question and its answer
- find their way through an unfamiliar process
- use the service on a mobile device
- recover easily from form errors

It also helps you to:

- save a user's answers automatically as they go
- capture analytics about each question
- handle branching questions and loops

Try the Register to vote service on GOV.UK to see an example of this

Tim Paul on

One-Thing-Per-Page

“ We could either display one question per page, or all questions on a single page or use an accordion pattern: a single page, but previous questions are collapsed.

“One thing per page”, Gov.uk

Tim Paul on

One-Thing-Per-Page

“One question per page works best. Users find them easier to use, they work well on mobile devices and they’re better at handling things like errors, branches, loops and saving progress.

“One thing per page”, Gov.uk

One-Thing-Per-Page Flow

- 01 – Display only one complex entity at a time.
- 02 – Errors are caught and shown early and often.
- 03 – Adds a sense of progression and increases momentum.
- 04 – Reduces the need to scroll up and down a lot.
- 05 – Ideally, show at most 6-7 input fields per page.

You can use this service to:

- get on the electoral register so you can vote in elections or referendums
- update your name, address or nationality by registering again with your new details
- get on or off the open register

It usually takes about 5 minutes.

Styling a Select Like It's 2019

POSTED BY
SCOTT JEHL
12/17/2018

Update 12/19 The select now has totally consistent appearance in Internet Explorer 11 and 10, thanks to a nice tip from Jelmer de Maat

The `select` element has long been difficult to style consistently across browsers. To avoid its shortcomings in the past, we have used workarounds like styling a parent element, adding pseudo-elements, and even using JavaScript to construct a select-like control out of different elements that are easier to style. But workarounds are hard to maintain and use, not to mention the accessibility challenges that custom elements bring.

Recently, we'd seen some articles suggest that things haven't changed a great deal with `select`'s styling limitations, but I decided to return to the problem and tinker with it myself to be sure. As it turns out, a reasonable set of styles can create a consistent and attractive `select` across new browsers, while remaining just fine in older ones too.

Form Design Patterns

WITHOUT FORMS, THE WEB IS A PASSIVE EXPERIENCE WHERE CONTENT IS JUST CONSUMED. BUT with forms the web can be collaborative, creative and productive. Forms are at the center of every meaningful interaction, so they're worth getting a firm handle on. Jump to table of contents.

On first glance, forms are simple to learn. Made up of just a handful of inputs, you can create a form in little time. But when we consider the journeys we need to design, the users we need to design for, the browsers and devices of varying sizes, capabilities and bugs being used; and ensuring that the result is simple and inclusive, form design becomes a far more interesting and bigger challenge.

Web Form Design Checklist

- 01 – What’s the minimum user input needed for them to get started?
- 02 – When is the right time and place to ask users to verify critical input?
- 03 – For each input, what’s the best form element to collect it fast and accurately?
- 04 – For sensitive data input (e.g. gender), do we explain why we need it?
- 05 – Do any form elements need hints (e.g. pass requirements, username)?
- 06 – Do we have an attribute profile for each input in our form?
- 07 – Do we always prioritize actionable copy (e.g. “Choose password”)?
- 08 – Do we always prefer tap-friendly components (buttons, toggles, sliders)?
- 09 – Do text boxes appear as text boxes (good padding, bordered)?
- 10 – Have we adjusted the width of each box as a hint to expected input?
- 11 – Do we use proper labels, associated with input fields?

Web Form Design Checklist

- 12 – Do we use letter case for the microcopy on labels?
- 13 – Do we highlight required or optional fields, or both?
- 14 – How do we style placeholders, and is the microcopy helpful?
- 15 – Will labels be top-aligned or right-aligned (preferably the former)?
- 16 – Will we be using floating labels? If so, are they accessible?
- 17 – Do inputs have `:focus` and `:active` styles?
- 18 – Have we enabled/disabled autocorrect, spell-check, autocapitalization?
- 19 – Do we use HTML5's `pattern` to restrict input with in-browser validation?
- 20 – Are there any inputs where we need to provide a reasonable default value?
- 21 – Do we make use of autofill with the `autocomplete` attribute?
- 22 – Do we always display the right keyboard on mobile (`inputmode`)?

Web Form Design Checklist

- 23 – Do we use autofocus to bring focus to the first input element on page load?
- 24 – Do we lay out fields in a single column (preferably yes)?
- 25 – Do we lay out field groups in multiple pages (one-thing-per-page)?
- 26 – Do we show at most 7–8 input fields at a time on desktop, 3–4 on mobile?
- 27 – Are radio buttons actually round (preferably yes)?
- 28 – Do we need a fallback input for radio buttons (“I’d rather not say”, “Other”)?
- 29 – Are checkboxes square, with enough padding and large font size (18px+)?
- 30 – For checkboxes used as filters, do we track low result count?
- 31 – Do we avoid <select>-dropdowns as much as possible?
- 32 – ...and use steppers (<10 options) or datalist/autocomplete (>10 options)?
- 33 – For autocomplete, do we surface frequent hits at the top of autosuggestions?

Web Form Design Checklist

- 34 – For a country selector, do we display some countries as frequently used?
- 35 – If so, do frequently used countries appear in the alphabetical list, too?
- 36 – How do we design the country selector, and what height should it have?
- 37 – For autocomplete, do we accept abbreviations (GB, UK, DE, NL, CH etc.)?
- 38 – For our autocomplete, do we also accept alternative manual input?
- 39 – Do we display the results count for categories with autocomplete?
- 40 – Is autocomplete keyboard-accessible, and forgiving of minor typos?
- 41 – Do we use a localization based on user-provided country or ZIP/postal code?
- 42 – Can we ask for a full name instead of first, middle and last names?
- 43 – Do we replace “Address Line 2” with contextual labels (Apt, suite, unit etc.)?
- 44 – Can we use an address look-up widget to speed up location input?

Web Form Design Checklist

- 45 – For date/time input, do we display input boxes or widgets with steppers?
- 46 – Do we provide autoformatting for phone, birthday, amounts, numbers, dates?
- 47 – For credit card input, can we avoid selection of the credit card type?
- 48 – As a label for the name on a credit card, do we use “Name on card”?
- 49 – As a label for security code, can we use “Security code” instead of “CVC”?
- 50 – As a label for expiry date, can we use a single input field with auto-masking?
- 51 – Can we use Payment Request API, Apple Pay, Google Pay etc.?
- 52 – For inline validation, can we define a threshold per input field?
- 53 – Can we not validate the input yet unless the threshold is reached?
- 54 – When editing a valid field, do we validate after full data entry?
- 55 – When editing an invalid field, do we validate during data entry?

Web Form Design Checklist

- 56 – Do we show success only if the user has moved to the next field?
- 57 – Do our error messages drive users to a clear path on how to fix the error?
- 58 – On submit, do we scroll the user to the first error and focus on it?
- 59 – ...or display the error above the submit button (focused)?
- 60 – If there are a few errors, do we additionally display a summary of errors?
- 61 – Do we display the error message just above the input field?
- 62 – Do we show the number of errors in the tab title as a prefix?
- 63 – Can we not disable submit buttons until all fields are filled in?
- 64 – Do we display confirmation boxes only for absolutely critical situations?
- 65 – Can we use undos to help users quickly restore data instead?
- 66 – Do we move users to the next field automatically after successful input?

Web Form Design Checklist

- 67 – Do we persist the data on refresh?
- 68 – Have we tabbed through the entire form (incl. date picker/autocomplete)?
- 69 – Is the tab order predictable and reasonable?
- 70 – Have we tested the form on desktop, tablet, mobile?
- 71 – Where do error messages appear? Do labels always appear in full?
- 72 – For lengthy forms, do we explain to users what docs/time the form requires?
- 73 – Do we have an input budget in place (max number of input fields per step)?
- 74 – Do we track the tap count (min number of taps needed to complete form)?
- 75 – What happens when the form is loading (skeleton screen, loading indicator)?

Summary

- 01 – Humans interpret input as solid, single entities.
- 02 – Always prefer (large) buttons, toggles, sliders.
- 03 – When typing, let users stay on keypad + autocomplete.
- 04 – Floating labels or top-/right-aligned labels.
- 05 – Radio buttons are round, checkboxes are squared.
- 06 – Avoid `<select>`-dropdowns: use steppers/datalist instead.
- 07 – Consider profiling every single input element.
- 08 – One-thing-per-page-flow, max 6–7 input fields per page.
- 09 – Single-col-layout with top-aligned labels is a safe bet.
- 10 – Inline validation: set thresholds, reward early, punish late.

Hidden Costs (Paul Boag)

“ Dark patterns help increase conversion short-term, but can damage company’s reputation irreversibly long-term. Often there are hidden costs that aren’t considered when a solution is implemented: lost in processing returns, cost of support, sales, marketing, renewed acquisition.

Security-Related Behavior

- 01 – We log in 15-20 times a day, seamless or explicitly.
- 02 – We tend to have 4.5 emails, used regularly.
- 03 – We tend to reuse passwords for “simple” accounts.
- 04 – We are really bad at remembering email/pass combos.
- 04 – We are really good at bypassing complexity with lifehacks.
- 05 – Most security breaches target DBs, not individual users.
- 06 – Strict security has a significant business cost.

Severe Security Measures

- 01 – Requiring email confirmation to proceed.
- 02 – Disabling sign up with an “already existing” email.
- 03 – Overly strict password requirements.
- 04 – Setting up a 2-factor-authentication too early.
- 05 – Brand new password setup during pass recovery.
- 06 – Limiting pass attempts and temporary account lockouts.
- 07 – Identifying images (store fronts/cars).
- 08 – Accessibility issues with visual recognition (CAPTCHA).
- 09 – Not revealing the whether login or pass is wrong.
- 10 – All ultimate examples of unloading our problems onto users.

Spam Prevention Strategy

- 01 – Use Akismet & Co. to block known spam IPs.
- 02 – Ask a random plain “human” question.
- 03 – Use a honeypot technique to lure bots into input.
- 04 – Use a keyboard-accessible slider to verify.
- 05 – Use time traps (< 1.5s) to disrupt repeated attempts.
- 06 – Turn off autocomplete for spam prevention input.
- 07 – Use legit labels (#phone) for a hidden field.
- 08 – If it doesn’t work, load reCAPTCHA 2 checkbox conditionally.
- 09 – If it doesn’t work, work around reCAPTCHA 3 on all pages.
- 10 – Don’t rely on pointer movements/text-based recognition.

The most well-understood and obvious pattern.

Works well with password managers.

Users often reuse password (87%) or write it down.

Very effective, but at the cost of usability.

Strict rules on number and type of characters.

Delay cookie expiry to avoid frequent sign-ins.

Automatic and one-tap SMS verification

Verify your users by SMS without making them deal with verification codes. By using the SMS Retriever API, your app can automatically retrieve verification codes intended for your app, without having to request full SMS reading permissions. Or, use the SMS User Consent API to get one-time permission to retrieve a single verification code.

Learn more

2-Factor-Authentication

A quite accepted pattern that is becoming a standard.

Comes in various flavours, SMS, QR code, app prompt.

Needs backup codes if device is no longer available.

No need for password rules, easier for signing up.

“Trust this device for 30 days” or similar restrictions needed.

Delay cookie expiry to avoid frequent sign-ins.

✓ Password updated

Your password has been updated successfully.

Get a magic link by email to automatically sign in on your mobile device.

Typing out a proper, secure password on your phone can be a pain (you're using a good strong password, right?). We can take away a little bit of that pain by sending you a magic link that will automatically sign you in to your iOS or Android device.

Open the email on your iPhone, iPad or Android device, click the button and you'll be all set with your new password.

 Send me a magic sign in link for my mobile device

Magical Sign-In

Basically 2-factor-auth but without a password at all.

Need to only remember email or phone number.

Needs backup codes if email is no longer available.

No need for password rules, as there are no passwords.

The link should expire soon (15 mins) and be used only 1x.

Doesn't work with pass managers, can get annoying.

Social Media Sign-In

Quick and no hassle for customers to sign in.

Great if the service merges multiple accounts into one.

Users are increasingly worried about privacy.

Users often don't remember what they've signed in with.

Services often have more accounts than users.

Requires a fallback if users don't want to sign in this way.

Authentication Design Checklist

- 01 – How do we ensure that auth/security don't stand in the way of usability?
- 02 – Do we prioritize usability vs. security in our UI, or the other way around?
- 03 – What are the more sensitive areas which require a more strict auth?
- 04 – In which situations will we prompt users to authenticate themselves?
- 05 – What password requirements do we want/need to implement?
- 06 – What authentication method do we want to prioritize for signing in?
- 07 – Is authentication via login/password going to be a default choice?
- 08 – Can we avoid asking users to verify email immediately?
- 09 – Can we ask users to verify email at review page or success page?
- 10 – Can we avoid asking users to verify their password?
- 11 – Can we use the show/hide pattern for password input?

Authentication Design Checklist

- 12 – Can we provide a live password requirement checklist?
- 13 – Can we ask for a passphrase instead of a password? How do we explain it?
- 14 – Do we provide a 2-factor-authentication (2-FA)?
- 15 – How do we explain 2-FA? What's the flow like?
- 16 – Can we replace security questions with a 2-FA?
- 17 – With 2-FA, can we avoid the SMS option (instead: QR, app, email)?
- 18 – Can we reward customers for using 2-FA (discount, free month etc.)?
- 19 – Do we provide a social media sign in?
- 20 – If yes, what services do we support? What permissions do they get?
- 21 – Do we provide a magical link sign in? If so, when?
- 22 – Do we provide a biometric sign in? If so, when?

Authentication Design Checklist

- 23 – Do we provide a connected device/Bluetooth sign in? If so, when?
- 24 – Do we have a spam prevention strategy in place?
- 25 – Do we really need CAPTCHA, or can we use honeypot/time traps instead?
- 26 – Can we set a long cookie expiry date to avoid frequent sign-ins?
- 27 – Can we set a long cookie expiry date for checkout (1-click-checkout)?
- 28 – When is the right time/place to ask for permissions (location/camera, etc.)?
- 29 – Can we authenticate with a phone number and a security text code?
- 30 – How do we design and build a password recovery experience?
- 31 – Do we limit the frequency of password recovery attempts?
- 32 – Do we enable customers to merge multiple accounts (email/Twitter etc.)?
- 33 – If not, can we suggest to customers what they signed in with last time?
- 34 – What do we do to prevent customers from using insecure passwords?

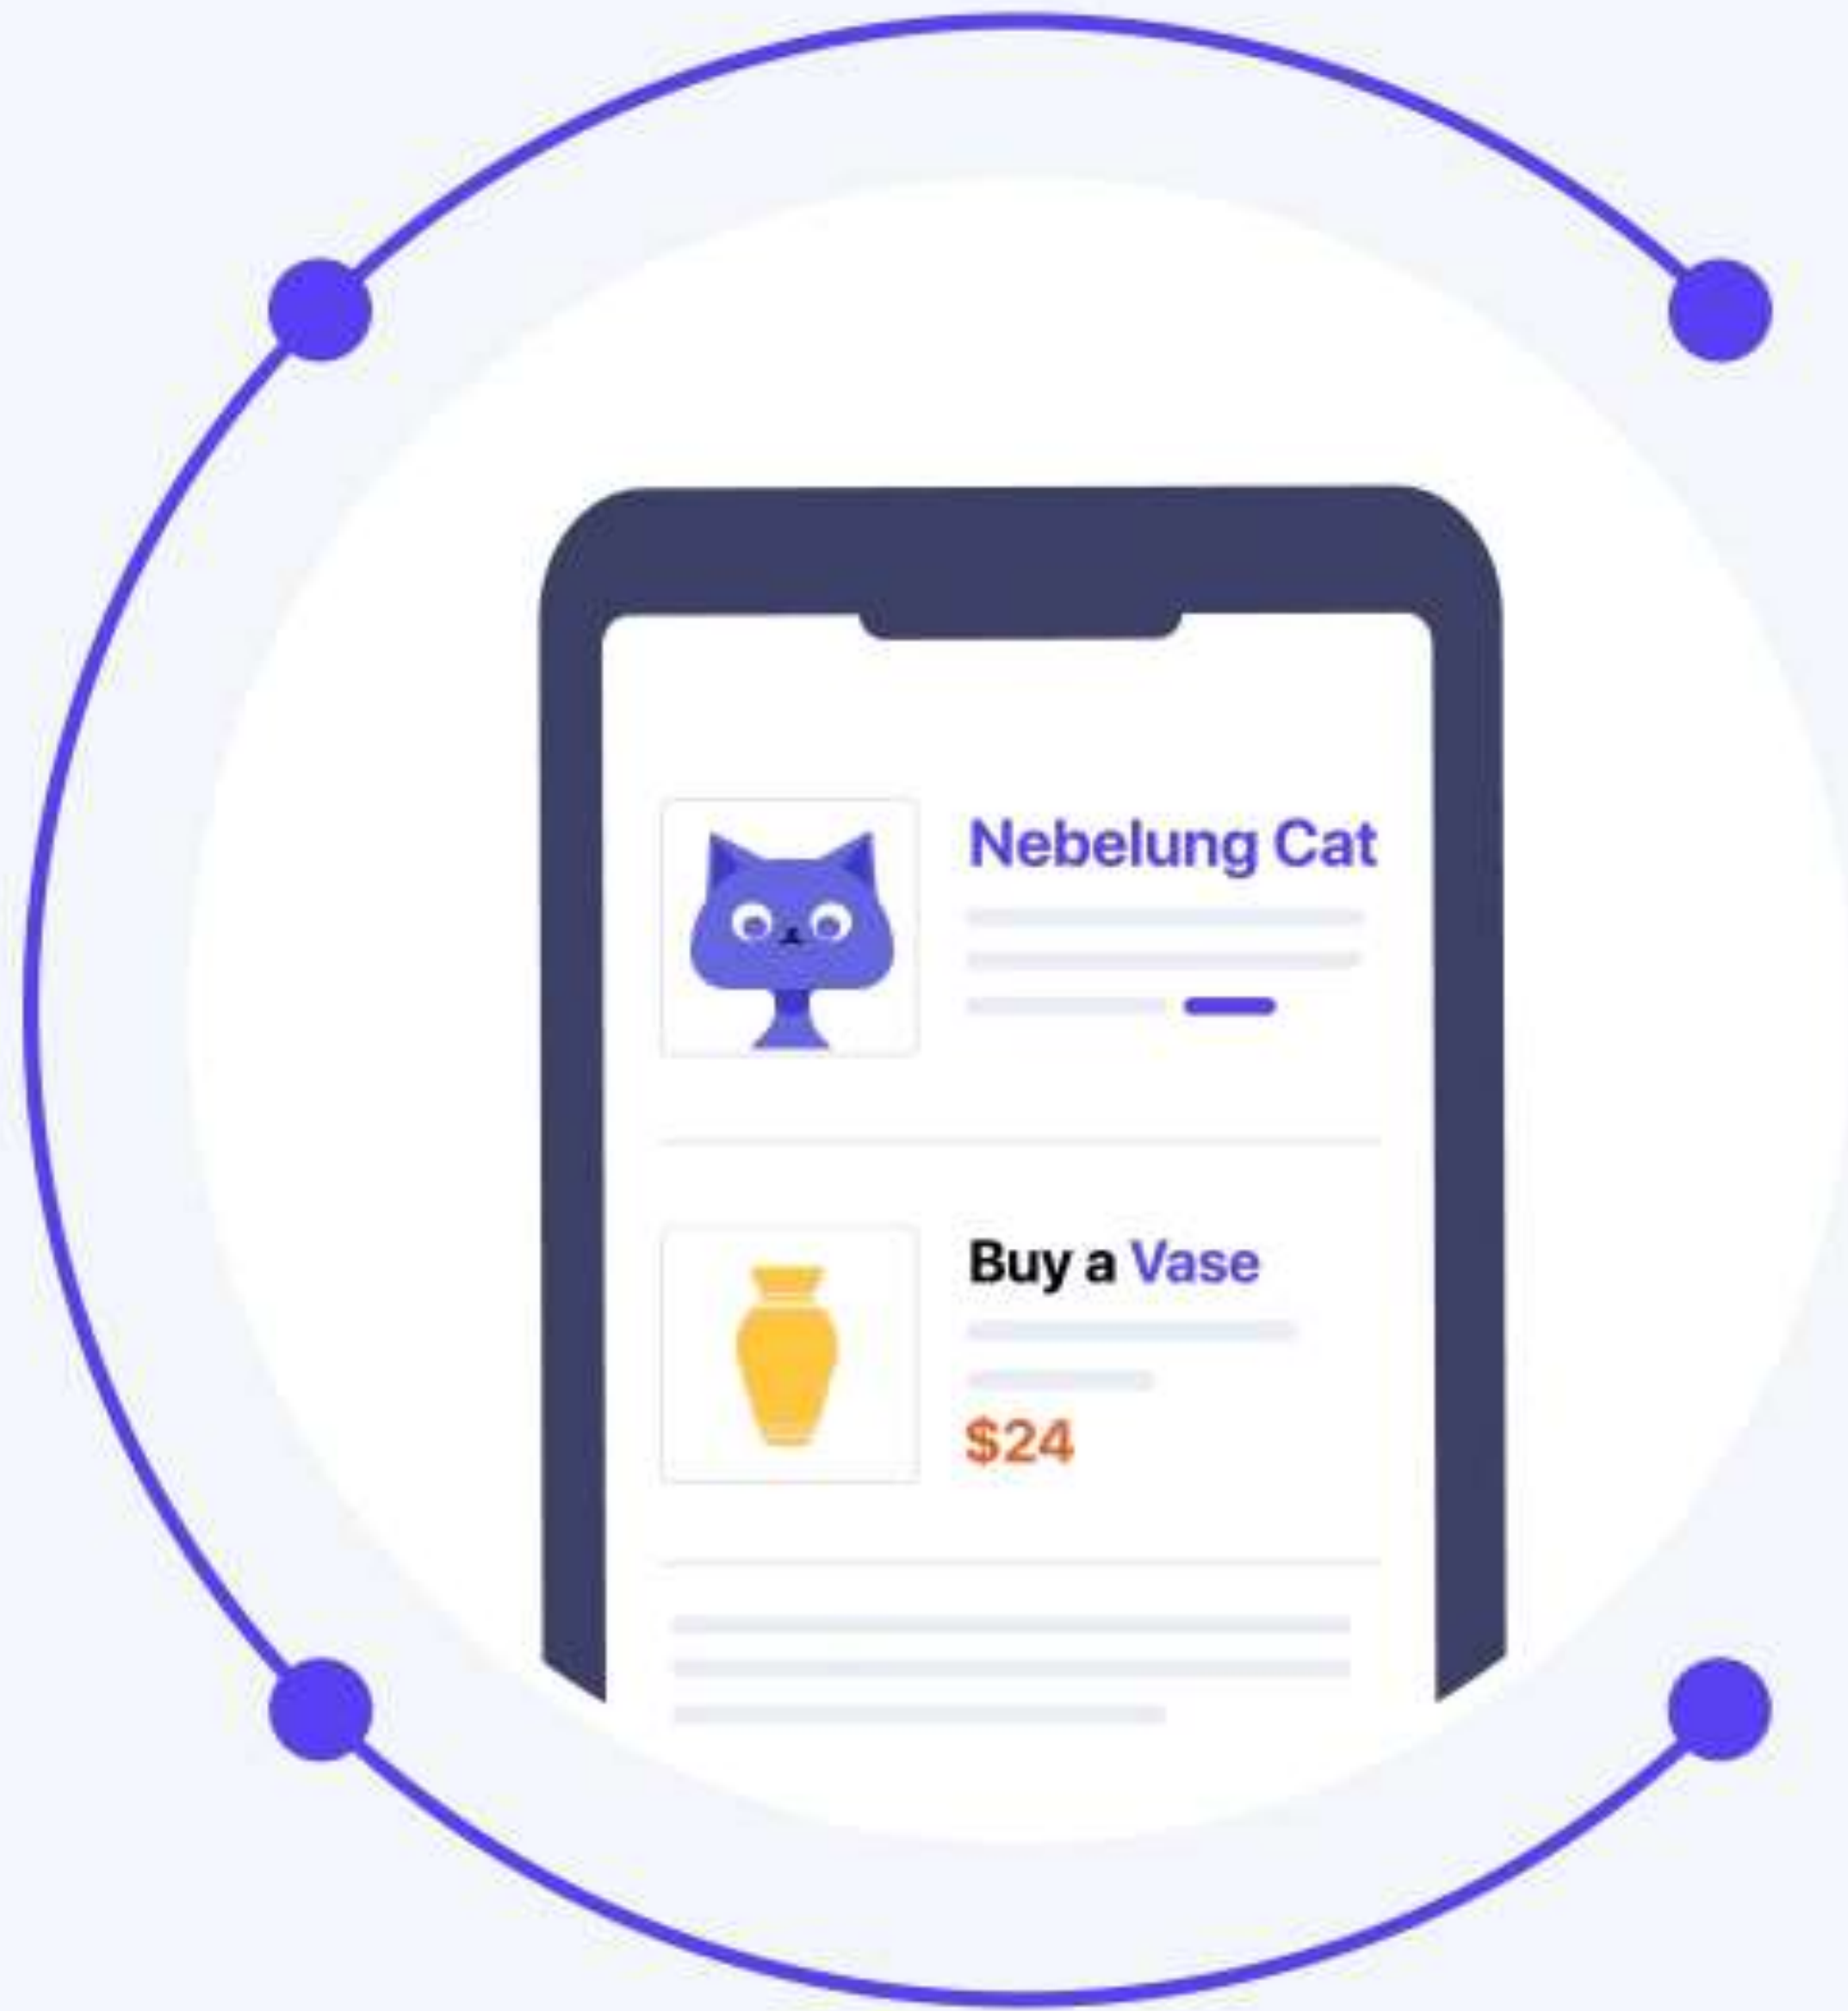

Summary

- 01 – Avoid old versions of CAPTCHA at all costs.
- 02 – Verify email when it matters most to users.
- 03 – Avoid strict password rules, they decrease privacy.
- 04 – Consider passphrases instead of passwords.
- 05 – Login failures have impact on revenue; measure it.
- 06 – Indicate what users signed in with last time.
- 07 – Regular accounts, online subscriptions: login/pass.
- 08 – One-time-customers, quick sign in: social sign in.
- 09 – Online banking, email lists: 2-factor auth.
- 10 – Workhorse apps: magical sign-in, with long cookie expiry.

Onboarding Task

- 01 – First ride is free.
- 02 – We need location and camera permission.
- 03 – We need some sort of authentication or log in.
- 04 – We need some sort of payment.
- 05 – We need consent to terms and conditions.

Lessons Learned

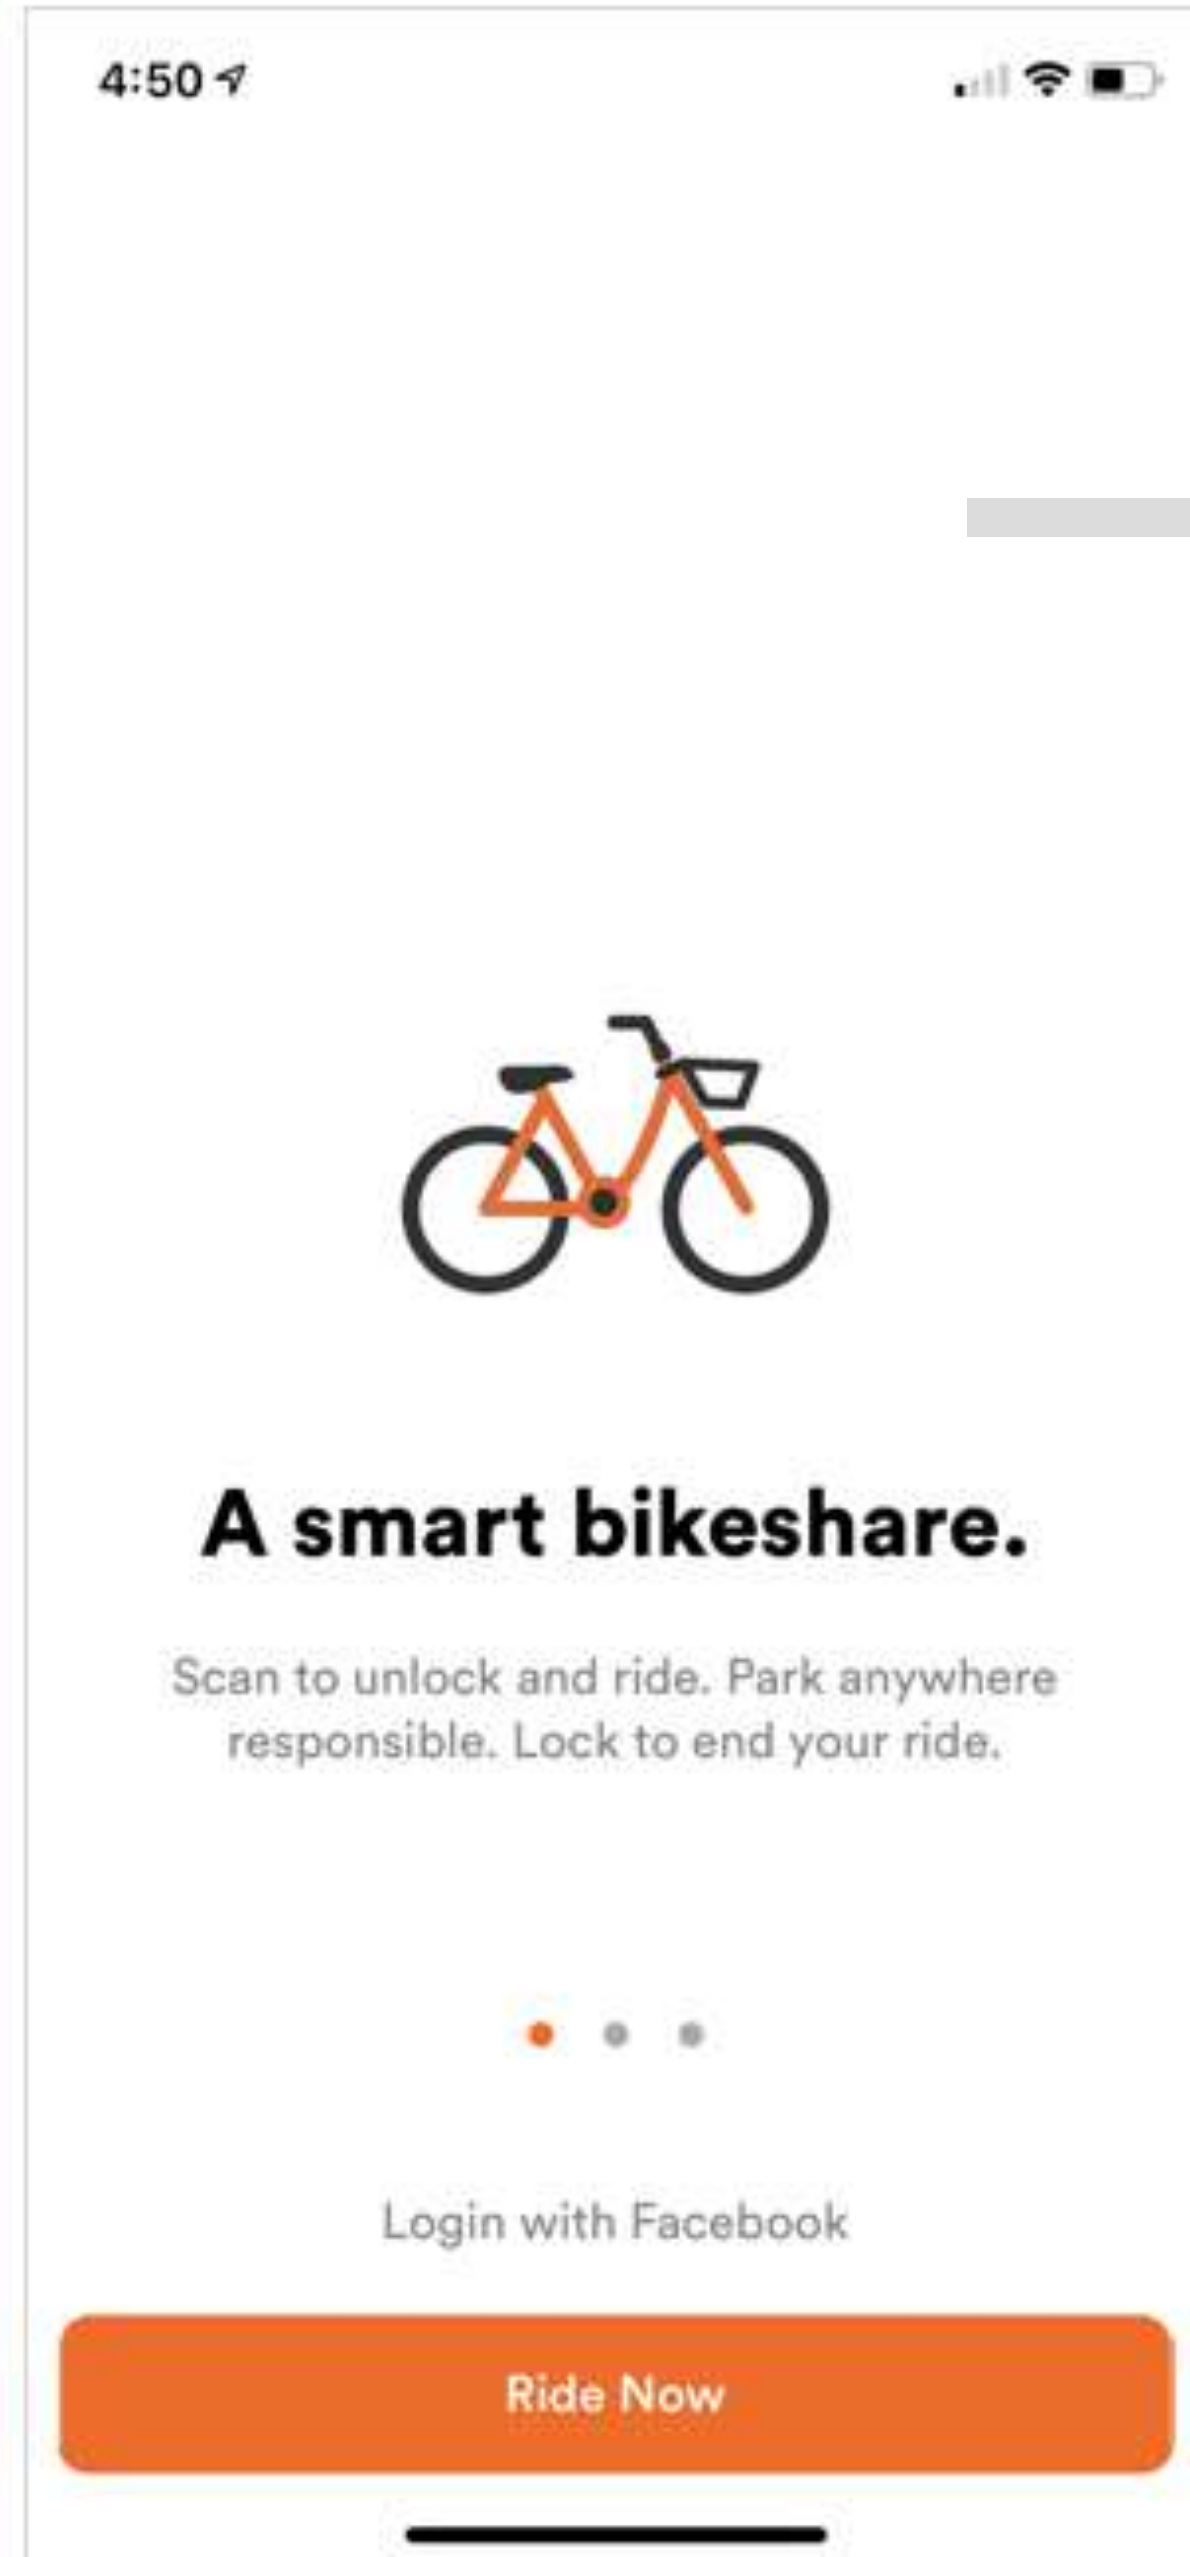

“ When we surface information to customers is critical. Get users to your core value as soon as possible, but not sooner. It took 7 steps to scan the bike in front of user and 9 more steps before they could actually ride it.

@maxine I'm just having a look at this one now. Wondering if we can separate out the app notification part for @jose to work on?

Onboarding Design Checklist

- 01 – What are “success moments” in our app?
- 02 – Are we focusing on “success moments” rather than features?
- 03 – Can we avoid intro tours, tooltips, wizards and slideshows?
- 04 – How many taps are required to accomplish first critical task?
- 05 – What different jobs does the product is hired for?
- 06 – What does success looks like for each of these jobs?
- 07 – What’s the minimal amount of data required to get there?
- 08 – When is the right timing to announce a particular feature?
- 09 – Do we use just-in-time education, gamification, empty states?
- 10 – Are we using progressive onboarding, creating account later?
- 11 – Reveal help when users actually need it, not when they don’t.

INTERCOM ON ONBOARDING

Onboarding isn't a metric, it's an outcome

“Onboarding means ensuring as many users as possible become successful ones. This book outlines time-tested thinking that will help your company do exactly that.”

How WordPress Onboards New Users

1 / 97

Summary

- 01 – Identify key data input, and focus on it first.
- 02 – Drive towards small wins, not features.
- 03 – Avoid bolt-on tooltips, prefer integrated UI.
- 04 – Too much contrast is as bad as too little contrast.
- 05 – Account should be the method of last resort.
- 06 – Customize onboarding flow based on intent.
- 07 – Speed users up with just-in-time shortcuts/tips.
- 08 – Build up an early warning system for new users.

Smart Interface Design Patterns

Wrapping Up

Smart Interface Design Patterns —

Wrapping Up

Summary

- 01 – With input, we think in solid, single entities.
- 02 – Our task is to map these entities in our web forms.
- 03 – Consider input budgets for your critical form inputs.
- 04 – Always prefer (large) buttons, toggles, sliders, autocomplete.
- 05 – Think about the right timing for input.
- 06 – Define reasonable input boundaries for each input.
- 07 – One-thing-per-page, top-aligned labels, single column-layout.
- 08 – Inline validation: use thresholds, reward early, punish late.
- 09 – Show actionable errors/errors summary above the input.
- 10 – 2-factor-auth and magic link work well. Fallback: email/pass.
