The process of proofreading with my tutor enables me to recognise which expressions are easy to understand, even for people who aren't familiar with the project or the technical terms used.
I like the process that allows me to take a step back and review my work objectively.
Also, it is really important to make sure that people can understand the documents that I write.
Originally I made documents for people specifically related to the project.
However, I realised that people joined the project at different stages and were not necessarily familiar with the technology.
What I keep in mind when I make a document

The document should be...

- Visually intuitive
- Concise
- Free from technical terms and too many acronyms.
